

Anthrologica

Position	Volunteer internships
Time	Flexible
Start date	Various
Location	Desk-based (either remotely or in our Oxfordshire office)

Background

Anthrologica is a research-based organisation specialising in applied anthropology in global health. Anthrologica was established to develop appropriate and sustainable processes for improving health and healthcare especially in resource scarce settings. Our specific expertise lies in incorporating the needs and perceptions of intended beneficiaries into healthcare policy and programming to ensure that it is contextually relevant and that opportunities for improving health are maximised. Anthrologica works cross sector within the healthcare structures of the countries in which we operate, often in collaboration with local partners. For further information and for a summary of recent projects, please see www.anthrologica.com

Overview of the role

Anthrologica interns assist the Director and support other Anthrologica team members. They participate in various activities (as research assistants, reviewing literature, preparing briefings and presentations, writing proposals etc) and will have the opportunity to develop their working knowledge of health in developing contexts, including the potential for fieldwork on Anthrologica research projects and evaluations.

Selection criteria

Under-graduate qualification in anthropology, medicine, public health or related social science
Familiarity with qualitative / quantitative research methods
Ability to show initiative and work effectively both independently and as part of a culturally diverse team
Excellent oral and written communication skills (fluent English essential)

We will consider interns from a range of disciplines / backgrounds, at various stages of their careers, who are engaging and have transferable skills and experiences. The essential qualities we look for are energy, enthusiasm, and willingness to get involved!

To apply

If you would like to be considered for an Anthrologica internship, please email your up-to-date Curriculum Vitae and a short supporting statement to Dr Juliet Bedford (julietbedford@anthrologica.com).

In your supporting statement please highlight your skills and experience and outline your interest in working with Anthrologica. Please provide the name of one referee, indicating whether we can contact them at this stage.
